CROSSROADS, AN ENGLISH PLAY BY THE PICKLES COMPANY

The students of the Carnot High School are loving it

Have you ever heard about Crossroads ? Crossroads is a play for teenagers or much older people which is mixing comedy and English. This play was created by the Pickles Company and was played in front of many students of the Carnot High School.

In the No Man's land, three amazing actors were on stage for about one hour. However, there were only three actors to play six really different characters. To switch from a character to another, they had to quickly get dressed in the backstage to change their costumes and it was all done. Charlie Purbrook was the only one to play just one character, the main character, the charming Mel. However, Chrisanthi Livadiotis was playing the smart Sinead aka Skye but also the stern Bow. Maxine was played by Lauren Easton who also played the smart Grandmother Margaret and the secretary who was planning Mel's interview.

At the end of the play, we asked them their origin. We learnt that Charlie Purbrook was from England. Chrisanthi Livadiotis was born in Cyprus and Lauren Easton was coming from New York, in the USA. As one of the actor said, everyone can become an actor wherever you are coming from and whatever you have studied. It is why they helped students to develop their acting abilities by giving them a place in the show.

The three actors perfectly performed the play this Friday. To all the people who are scared by the language barrier, Arnaud Cramois's play was perfect for non-native English speakers and the made learning English funny.
